Dean Deering said that special observance would be made of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the agricultural Extension Service in Maine, in addition to the usual program of talks, demonstrations, and discussions on agricultural and home economics subjects.

Thirteen other state-wide organizations will be invited to assist in planning the Farm and Home Week program in special fields.

Home industries, poultry farm management, farm credit, potato production, and dairying are among the more than twenty special programs now being planned.

Dean Deering also announced the names of those on the committee planning the Farm and Home Week program. They are Maurice D. Jones, chairman; Miss Pearl Greene, Fred P. Loring, C. A. Day, L. M. Dorsey, all of the University staff.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haselton, who returned to their home in Calais Sunday after spending several days in town, were recalled by the death of his father, Sherman Haselton.

SHERMAN J. HASELTON

Sherman J. Haselton died at his home Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock after a week's illness. He was born in Albany Oct. 2, 1864, the son of John and Hannah Wheeler Haselton.

He was educated in the schools of Albany and at Gould Academy. For some years he was a farmer. Coming to Bethel 33 years ago, he was employed in the Bethel Creamery, the C. K. Fox store, and the mill of Merrill, Springer Co. From 1914 until his retirement on account of ill health in 1933, he was night watchman at Bethel Inn.

He married Miss Ethel Morse of Bethel on June 9, 1906, who survives, with two children, Charles Haselton of Calais, and Miss Eugenia Haselton of Bethel. He was a member of the Methodist Church.

Besides his wife, son and daughter, he leaves two nephews, John Anderson and John Haselton, both of Bethel; two nieces, Mrs. Arthur Bean of Norway and Mrs. Alton Hutchinson of Bethel; and a cousin, Gertrude Litchfield of Portland.

Funeral services are held at the Greenleaf funeral home this afternoon, Rev. Chester B. Oliver of Calais and Rev. P. J. Clifford officiating.

GOULD QUINT TO RESUME PRACTICE MONDAY

The Gould Academy quintet, after a two weeks vacation, will resume practice on Monday afternoon at 3:30. The team with three victories to its credit has a real job ahead, in preparation for an invasion of Norway on Friday, Jan. 7, where both the varsity and the Second Team will play. Coach Anderson is expecting one of the toughest games of the year at Norway but feels, if his men can get back into condition again in the few days allotted, that they will give a good account of themselves. The team has shown real scoring ability, running up 125 points in the first three games. If they can again find their shooting eye, there should be be a real battle at Norway, where games are always fast and furious.

Two Home Games

Following the Norway game Bethel fans will again see their team in action in some great games. On Friday, Jan. 14, the big rugged team of veterans from Fryeburg Academy will be here. West Paris High will furnish opposition aplenty for the second team in the preliminary game.

Then on Tuesday, Jan. 18, Norway will return with both its varsity and second teams to again do battle with the "Blue and Gold" of Gould Academy.

The members of the Bethel Parent Teacher Association have been invited to attend a meeting of the West Bethel Association on Wednesday evening, Jan. 5. All those who plan to accept the invitation are requested to notify Mrs. Syll LeClair or Mrs. Earl Davis.

Our grocery stores will be closed all day Saturday, Jan. 1.

MAINE CROP SEASON MODERATELY FAVORABLE

The 1937 crop season was moderately favorable for crop production in Maine, according to a joint report released by the United States and Maine Departments of Agriculture. Average monthly temperatures were above normal for all months except October during the crop season extending from April 1 to October 31. Rainfall was moderately heavy in May and June, light during the months prior to October, in which it was rather heavy.

Total crop acreage in Maine is estimated at 1,360,140 acres in 1937 compared with 1,329,650 acres harvested in 1936. Increases were made in the acreage harvested of buckwheat, dry beans, beans for canning, hay, potatoes, peas for canning, and sweet corn for canning. The acreage of corn, wheat, and oats harvested was decreased.

The 1937 Maine potato crop is estimated at 48,593,000 bushels compared with 45,585,000 bushels harvested in 1936 and 44,078,000 bushels the five year average 1928-1932. The crop was slightly handicapped by moist weather at planting time but plentiful moisture and warmer temperatures in June aided early growth. Warm dry weather durng the rest of the growing period retarded blight development and limited crop growth. Harvesting conditions were excellent. Yields were moderately variable although not up to the expectations of high yields which prevailed earlier in the season. Potatoes went into storage in very good condition. The yield per acre of 287 bushels compares with 285 bushels in 1936 and 240 bushels in 1935.

The Maine apple crop at 1,147,000 bushels compares with 605,000 bushels harvested in 1936 and 1,854,000 bushels the five year average 1928-1932. The large production of apples was the result of favorable growing conditions and was greater in the farm orchards than in the commercial orchards. Much of the farm orchard crop was of inferior quality.

The yield of wheat was better than last year, oats and barley the same, and buckwheat was less. The yield of hay was slightly less than that of last year. The acreage of canning crops continued the increase started in 1934.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

The up-to-the minute war technique is to invade a country, kill soldiers and civilians and devastate and capture its cities—but not declare war. Perfect example of ths is provided by the Sino-Japanese conflict. Neither country has broken off diplomatic relations with the other. China is represented in Tokio; Japan in Nanking. In theory there is no war. In actual fact, however, one of the most sanguinary conflicts in history is being waged.

Another up-to-the technique is for a country to pay lip service to peace—and at the same time take steps that must inevitably lead to war. The two principal Fascist dictatorships, Germany and Italy, and their ally, Japan, are past masters of this. Japan invades China—and claims she is doing it in the interests of peace. Italy conquers the Ethiopian Empire by armed force—in the interest of peace. Germany reoccupies the Ruhr, and threatens her neighbors—again, with peace as the battle cry.

On the 11th of December, an event took place which may prove to be of epochal significance to the modern world. Italy withdrew from the League of Nations, following in the steps of Germany and Japan. For a couple of years, as every foreign observor knows, Italy has been a league member in name only—she has been actively or passively opposed to almost every League objective, and has done everything possible to frustrate League policies By her withdrawal, she made this attitude official. And, following the post-war precedent, Il Duce made a fiery speech in which he said that Italy's action was essential to the maintenance of world peace. This theory will be given credence in the Facsist powers but nowhere else in the world. For, in the view of practically all of the experts, Fascist nations have been moving steadily toward war for several years, have been delaying conflict only for the reason that their military machines were inadequate, and finally are reaching the point where, in the view of their general staffs, they are about ready for Der Tag. Mussolini's action in taking Italy definitely out of the League brings the deadline closer.

It is a mistake to look at the various undeclared wars that have taken place the past few years as individual, unrelated events. For all these conflicts are part and parcel of a closely-knit, ominous pattern. The Fascist countries, in brief, are aligning solidly against their enemies—the Democratic countries. And in this, each side will likely have some curious allies.

For example: England is a Democracy. Yet England has been tacitly aiding and abbetting the Spanish insurgent movement, led by General Franco, who has openly declared that in the event of victory he will establish a Fascist state, and who has been aided with money, men and munitions by Italy and Germany. England's reasons for her support of Franco are largely commercial, plus her jitteriness over the security of her empire's far-flung lifeline which was never in greater danger than it is today.

On the other side, Russia will be on the side of the Democracies—for the reason that the Communists and Fascists are bitterly opposed, even though their theories of government have much in common so far as the subjugation of individual liberties are concerned. Further, Russia really wants peace—her gigantic national development campaign requires that everything be given to its progress, and that nothing be expended on anything else. A war, with its demands on Russia's human and mechanical and monetary resources, would bring this campaign to a close.

The United States seems far away from all these happenings. But dictatorship has come at last to this hemisphere. In Brazil, President Vargas, faced with growing revolt among the people because of his policies, has virtually emasculated the Congress and the courts, assured his own perpetuation in office, suspended the Brazilian constitution and created what is to all intents and purposes a Fascist state. And Vargas, emulating the example of the bigger dictators, took all these steps in the name of peace and progress and tranquility. There is a very good chance that similar events will occur in some of the other republics to the south.

To repeat, the deadline draws nearer. Whether a major war will occur is dependent on certain concrete things. Japan is winning in China—but she is ruining herself economically in the process. Germany lacks the economic resources essential to a long war. Franco is steadily gaining in Spain—but he has a long way to go, and his economic position is also precarious; the insurgent movement, according to all commentators would collapse in a week if something happened to cause a withdrawal of German-Italian support. The financial weaknesses of the Fascist powers is the biggest [illegible] in maintaining today's troubled world peace.

THE LOW DOWN
HICKORY GROVE

If a feller has a little time on his hands, it don't do him any harm to read a half a page or so of of history.

And when you read about what your great grandpa was doin', you will get over the idea that we are so ultra advanced and such hot hombres. And some of the things we been tryin', as new era stuff, it was a fizzle, 100 years ago.

And there was Napoleon and Caesar—they were invincible for quite a spell. And then there was the Kaiser, and Coxey's army, and the Populists, and Carrie Nation, and others, risin' up to scare us or reform us. And when the shoutin' was over, it was just some kinda smart-like person's idea and plan, so he could live easy himself, or maybe get elected or retire in luxury.

And history, it repeats—is an old saying. And we will wake up again, and our gold watch and chain will be gone and the tax collector will be bangin' on the front door, and he won't have such beautiful and flowery news as we been kinda in the habit of listenin' to.

Yours, with the low down,

AFTER CHRISTMAS JOTTINGS

Oxford County United Parish

The hearts of all in the Parish go out to Mr. Gledhill in his recent bereavement. He and his mother were going to Massachusetts to enjoy the Thanksgiving season with his friend, Mr. Roddy, minister in Great Barrington, when they were hit by another car in Westfield. Mrs. Gledhill was taken to the hospital in that city, but was released after two days. They returned to the Parish the following Saturday, but Mrs. Gledhill did not seem to make the expected recovery. Her condition finally demanded hospital treatment. She was removed to the Dixon Hospital at Norway where she passed away on the afternoon of Christmas Day. An examination disclosed a fracture at the base of the skull, a fact that had not been discovered by x-ray. Funeral services were held at South Paris, Monday afternoon; Rev. Messrs. Colby, Bull, Palmer and Roddy taking part in the service. Mrs. Gledhill has been with her son in the Parish since a year ago last summer. During these months she won many friends, and was ever greatly welcomed at the Parish functions for her evident enjoyment of all that was going on. We will miss her on those occasions when we gather and others of us will miss the visits we had with her in her home.

Following the services held in New Jersey Tuesday morning, Mr. Gledhill will accompany Mr. Roddy on a trip to the latter's home in the South. He will return to Massachusetts in time to testify in the Westfield court in the case of the one responsible for the accident; and to the Parish near the middle of the month.

Saturday, New Year's Day, calls together the members of the North Waterford Church for their Annual Business Meeting. A business meeting is also called for Center Lovell for the evening.

On Sunday, Communion Services will be held at Waterford and at North Waterford. The service at North Waterford will be held at 11:15 a. m. There will be a Bates Student to supply the pulpits at Center Lovell and East Stoneham. The Young People's service in the evening will be held at 7 o'clock and this will probably be held around the fireplace at the Waterford parsonage.

Next Wednesday evening we are inviting to the Waterford Parsonage all those who are interested in forming a reading club, or to make other plans that will bring us more opportunities for development in several ways. At any rate come with suggestions, Wednesday, for those things you would enjoy during the winter and we will see what can be done.

No more Albany Circles until next year! We will miss those gatherings, but will look forward to them when they begin again. Next Sunday afternoon at Albany we will gather for our service at the Town House School.

FARLEY—LITTLEHALE

The Perkins Valley Adventist Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding Christmas night at 7:30 when Miss Beulah Frances Littlehale became the bride of Paul Ray Farley of Bath. The ceremony was performed by Elder Dallinger of Portland. The couple stood under an arch of evergreen with a large wedding bell hanging in the center and the pulpit was properly decorated with little Christmas trees and colored lights.

The bride was given away by her father, Walter E. Littlehale. The bride's dress was of blue velvet with hat and accessories to match. The bridal march was played by Mrs. Frank Hawkes of Portland. The bridesmaid was Virginia Jordan of Buckfield and her gown was of wine colored velvet. Adelbert Bowen was the best man.

Mrs. Farley is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Littlefield of Perkins Valley. She received her education in the schools of Woodstock and Buckfield, graduating from Buckfield High School. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Farley of Bath. He has a position in the Bath Iron Works.

After a short honeymoon the young couple will reside at Bath where a furnished apartment is ready for them.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the union school house where a large crowd gathered to do homage to the young couple. Refreshments of ice cream, candy and peanuts were served. A wedding cake was cut by the bride.

A pleasing program was given which consisted of a solo by Walter Appleby, "I love you truly"; a duet by Mrs. Bernal Thurlow and daughter, "Life's Railway," with guitar accompaniment; Mrs. Adelbert Bowen rendered the solo, "O Promise Me;" Mrs. Chas. Swinton sang "Let Me Call You Sweetheart;" "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes" was sung by Elder Hollinger. Poems were recited by Mary Hendrickson, Harold Andrews, Lucille Andrews, and an original poem by Mr. Farley, father of the groom, and Earle Farley, the brother. Readings were given by Helvi Koskela and Henry Farley, grandfather of the groom.

The couple were the recipients of many nice gifts which bespeaks the love and esteem in which they are held. They were generously showered with confetti and many wishes were bestowed for a happy married life. Relatives and friends from Bath, Portland, New York, and adjoining towns attended the wedding and reception.

The young people of Newry have been invited to a social at the Bethel Methodist Church this Friday evening at 7.30 by the Epworth League. These parties of the two groups have always been good fun and it is hoped there will be a good representation of Newry young people there.

We are looking forward to the coming of a group of students from the Christian Association of Bates College. They will conduct a social in Magalloway on Saturday evening, Jan. 8, and on the 9th will take charge of the Errol and Wilson's Mills hurch services. On Sunday evening they will be the main speakers at a young people's rally to be held in the Bear River Grange Hall for the young people of Upton, Newry, Bethel Congregational and Methodist Churches, Hanover and Rumford Point. This rally promises to be worthwhile so please save the date and watch for further notices.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

When Jerry Warriner returns from a vacation and discovers that his lovely wife, Lucy, has been out all night with her voice teacher, he will not believe that he car broke down and they had to stay at an inn. Lucy and Jerry quarrel and that leads to a divorce, with Lucy winning an interlocutory decree. They both still love each other but are too proud to admit it. Jerry starts running around with Toots Binswanger, an exotic night club dancer, and in retaliation Lucy quickly announces her engagement to Dan Leeson, handsome young Oklahoma oil magnate. Dan's mother hears of Lucy's escapade with the vocal teacher and she asks Jerry about it. Jerry denies it and stoutly maintains that Lucy's reputation is of the best. As he is leaving Lucy murmurs her thanks. He winks at her. "Finest bit of perjury I've done in years," he whispers.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Chapter Four

Several days later Aunt Patsy looked across the table as Lucy sipped her breakfast coffee. "Seen the paper this morning?" she asked. Lucy shook her head.

"Well, take a look at this," Patsy said, handing the paper to her niece. Staring out at her from the newspaper page, Lucy saw a photograph of Jerry and a beautiful young girl. They were wearing tennis clothes and carrying rackets. The caption asked, "Love Set?" Lucy was startled, of course, but she tried to conceal it from Patsy. "Oh yes," she said nonchalantly. "That's Barbara Vance. You know who she is, don't you?"

Patsy nodded. "The madcap heiress. Isn't that what the papers usually call her? What I want to know is, what is she doing with Jerry?"

"Entertaining him, running around town with him and, I expect, falling in love with him."

"You can't tell all that from just looking at this picture can you?" Patsy asked.

"No," Lucy said, "but some of our mutual friends have been telling me about them. Seems Jerry's having a pack of fun with her." Lucy sniffed. "She shouldn't have her head turned by that, though. I've seen him have fun with a jumping jack."

"Well," Patsy commented, "she looks all right to me."

"There's one consolation, at least," Lucy said. "This will keep him away from that awful Toots person."

Patsy smiled wryly. "One more consolation like that," she opined, "and you'll burst a blood vessel."

Lucy stamped into her bedroom and slammed the door.

At three o'clock that afternoon Jerry pushed the bell at the apartment of Armand Levalle. A Japanese house boy answered his ring.

"My name's Jerry Warriner," Jerry explained. "My wife here?"

The Jap looked blank. "Please — I do not know," he said.

"Well, I'll soon find out," Jerry said and started to push past the Jap. The servant barred his way. "You cannot go in there, please," he remonstrated.

Jerry glowered. "Who's going to stop me?" he demanded.

"Me stop you," the Jap explained. Jerry tried to push by again but the Jap grabbed his arm, twisted it expertly and Jerry found himself stretched out on the floor.

"Very sorry, please," the Jap apologized. "I told you —."

Jerry jumped to his feet and grabbed the Jap around the waist. "Me jui Jitsu, too," he said. "Banzai!" And he tossed the Jap into a corner.

Jerry threw open the door and strode into the living room. Instead of the intimate scene he expected to find, Jerry stared at a room full of people listening to Lucy sing while Armand played her accompaniment. Embarrassed, Jerry quickly sat in a chair at the rear of the room and tilted it back against the wall. It slipped on the polished floor and Jerry crashed to the floor.

"Honestly, Patsy," Lucy told her aunt later, "he was a sorcens. If you'd seen him when his chair toppled over —." Lucy went off into a gale of laughter.

Patsy nodded approvingly. "That's one thing I will say for Jerry. He's never dull."

"But he's so silly," Lucy said. "I know he expected to find me in Armand's arms. He must have been terribly disappointed."

"You know," Patsy said pointedly, "you and Jerry have had some grand times together. It's a shame to see them go. But then, a girl really wants dependability and security, doesn't she?"

Lucy sighed. "I suppose so."

"Then she should buy an annuity," was Patsy's biting comment. "It would be more fun than Dan Leeson. But why should I talk? I'm not going to marry him."

Lucy suddenly made a decision. "Neither am I," she announced firmly. "I can't. I'm still in love with that lunatic bollwevil who acts like a maniac."

Lucy strode to the phone, called Armand and asked him to come to her apartment right away. While she was waiting for him to arrive she wrote a note to Dan breaking their engagement.

"Will you please give this to Dan?" she asked Patsy. "I simply can't face him."

When Armand arrived she explained her decision to him. "You see," she smiled, "I still love my husband." Armand shrugged his shoulders. The whims of American women were beyond his ken.

"Will you please talk to him, Armand?" Lucy pleaded. "Try to convince him that the night we spent at the inn was entirely innocent. It means so much to me."

"How much does it mean?" Armand asked significantly. Lucy stared in amazement. "I cannot help it," Armand protested. "The pupils are not so plentiful and — well, I must eat, you know."

Without a word Lucy went to her handbag, took out some bills and handed them to Armand. "Here," she said coldly. "This is all I have."

Armand bowed. "You are very generous," he said. "I shall go to Mr. Warriner immediately —."

The doorbell interrupted him and they heard Aunt Patsy greeting Jerry in the foyer.

"He mustn't see you here," Lucy whispered. "Quick! Hide in here." Lucy pushed the bewildered Armand into her bedroom and shut the door. She turned to greet Jerry.

"I've come to apologize for my behavior at Armand's," Jerry said humbly. "I was a prize lunatic and I'm sorry."

"That's all right," Lucy smiled. "I enjoyed it."

"It must be that guy Armand. Every time I think of him I see red."

Lucy laughed again.

"Then you'll accept my apology?" Jerry persisted. "I know I made a blue ribbon sap of myself and I'm sure I embarrassed you beyond words."

"Of course I accept it. Forget it," Lucy assured him.

The bell rang again and Aunt Patsy greeted Dan Leeson and his mother. Jerry jumped from his chair, startled.

"Oh — oh," he whispered. "I've caused you enough trouble for one day. They'll have a fit if they know you're entertaining your ex-husband. I'll duck until they're gone." He tiptoed swiftly to the bedroom door and, before Lucy could stop him, ducked inside.

Lucy, Dan Leeson and his mother had hardly finished exchanging greetings when there came a loud crashing noise from the bedroom.

"What on earth was that?" asked the startled Mrs. Leeson.

"Oh — someone is - - - someone is cleaning up in there," Lucy explained. There was a sound of splintering wood, the crash of glassware and suddenly the door burst open and Armand looking much the worse for the wear, came tearing out. "Don't forget to touch second," was Patsy's placid advice as he flew past. Jerry came rushing out in hot pursuit.

Mrs. Leeson rose with icy calm. "Well!" she said. "Never did I expect anything like this from you, Lucy." Dan Leeson bounded to his feet and shook his finger at Lucy. "If you came to me on your knees I wouldn't forgive you for this," he stormed. "Our engagement is off!"

As Dan and his mother started for the door Aunt Patsy detained them. She handed Dan Lucy's note breaking their engagement. "You can't fire us," she said. "We quit."

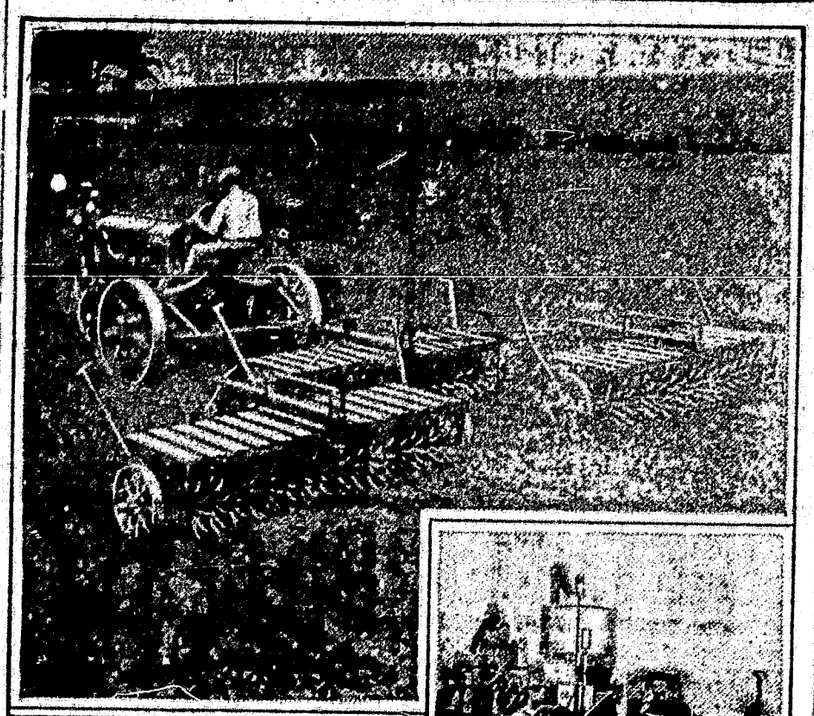
He's An Industrial Worker!



YOU would naturally think of the man operating the tractor as a farmer. And he is a farmer, but he's also an increasingly important figure in the industrial world, not only as a consumer but as a producer. He's engaged in hoeing up a field of soy beans which later, after passing through various factory processes, you'll be using in the form of paint and varnish, soap, linoleum and scores of other products. Consumers Information points out that 91 million pounds of soy bean oil, a comparatively new crop for American farmers, was produced in one recent year. Of this amount, 2½ million pounds went into the soap kettles, 5 million into linoleum and 13 million into paint and varnish. This brand new market for American farmers, who are now growing a large number of industrial as well as food products, has been developed, like many others, through the vast research programs undertaken by American industry, whose laboratories have added untold millions to the national wealth and also thousands of jobs for American workers.
